Founded in 1993, Beyond Borders (BB) helps people build movements to liberate themselves from oppression and isolation. In addition to pioneering prevention programming to address violence against women and girls and HIV through its Rethinking Power program, Beyond Borders is also implementing and supporting programs that use dialogue- and community-based methodologies rooted in human rights to address the systemic issues of child domestic slavery, inequality in access to quality education, and lack of access to dignified work and sustainable livelihoods. Beyond Borders helps people build movements in Haiti to:

- End Child Slavery;
- Guarantee universal access to education;
- End violence against women and girls (VAWG); and,
- Replace systems that oppress the poor with systems that support dignified work and sustainable livelihoods.

Introduction

BB is one of the foremost child rights actors in Haiti and a steadfast partner to Haitian communities. Its 23 years of experience, expert knowledge on the issue of child slavery in Haiti, and evidence-based grassroots approaches to social and behavior change distinguish this organization from its peers.

BB was one of the first to develop and implement participatory, dialogue-based tools to shift social norms in Haiti. It has rigorously continued testing, adapting, evaluating and sharing these tools to ensure applicability and impact both upstream and downstream, in urban and rural settings.

BB is rapidly emerging as an expert in VAWG prevention. Its successful adaptation of SASA! for Haiti has important implications for VAWG activists both throughout Haiti and globally. The new Power to Girls methodology is already garnering international interest and places the organization at the cutting edge of empowerment efforts to support girls.

Across its programming, BB is guided by the wisdom of a Haitian proverb that says: the rock in the water does not understand the misery of the rock in the sun. This proverb embodies BB's belief that those living with suffering-the rocks in the sun-are best suited to identify their problems and generate lasting solutions to address them. It also informs BB's approach to collaboration with Haitian communities, which focuses on the strength and dignity of the Haitian people, unlike more traditional charity models that focus on their need.

Shifting social norms and affecting change to societal conditions are gradual processes. While an external agent can infuse resources and training to catalyze this work, transformation must come from within the community itself. BB's three complementary programs share the common theme of igniting community-led processes toward liberation and change, reaching some of Haiti's most marginalized people in more than 55 urban and rural communities. Through training, awareness raising, and advocacy, BB helps communities, institutions, families, and individuals harness their power to create lasting change.

Form 990 p 2: Line 4a Description-2

The Movement to End Child Slavery

To build the movement to end child slavery (restavèk) in Haiti, Beyond Borders (BB) propagates models that provoke conversation and action among adults. This leads to changes in norms, the emergence of child protection structures, and reintegration of separated children back into their families. BB implements complementary programs that address the root causes of child domestic servitude both on the supply side in their home (usually rural) communities, and on the demand side in destination (usually urban) communities.

The movement to end child slavery grew in both intensity and reach. During the period, more than 2,600 Child Rights Activists (CRAs) were trained across nine urban and thirteen rural communities.

Form 990 p 2: Line 4a Description-3

Child Protection Program

BB's urban Child Protection Program (CPP) works to catalyze a broad social movement for children's rights, with a special focus on stopping of the practice of child domestic slavery (restavèk).

Evaluation data demonstrate the most significant reported changes among program participants:

- Decrease or elimination of physical violence as a form of discipline;
- Increased awareness of value of children;
- Developed behaviors to protect children;
- New commitment to ending the restavèk practice; and,
- Increased community engagement to protect children.

36 volunteer urban child protection structures are engaged in protecting children and ending child slavery. The Port-au-Prince network of adult survivors of restavèk grew tremendously during the period, from 63 to 243 members.

BB is building capacity of Child Protection Brigades (CPBs) to track children moving out of restavèk. Neighborhood CPBs share anecdotal intervention reports:

The Piblen CPB received a call from a neighbor reporting abuse of a child in restavèk. Taken from her rural home after her parents' death, the child had been living in restavèk under the promise that she would be cared for and sent to school.

The CPB reported that the training they received from BB was what allowed them to navigate the situation successfully, leading to her retrieval by her extended family. She is now living with family and in school.

After a similar intervention in the Bwajanchâl neighborhood, CPB president Peterson Dareus quipped, "People in the community now know that the CPB is like the CIA. If you are mistreating children, we will know about it."

Form 990 p 2: Line 4a Description-4

FY 2016 Outputs

Form 990 p 2: Line 4b Description-2

The Model Community Initiative

The Model Community Initiative (MCI) contributes to the movements to end child slavery, guarantee universal access to education, promote sustainable livelihoods, and end violence against women and girls (VAWG). The MCI accompanies rural communities to protect, educate and feed their children in order to stop the flow of children into restavèk.

During the period, parents retrieved 78 (55 girls) of 158 children in restavèk. 1,275 CRAs were trained across nine communities, with the most significant changes reported by participants:

1. Decrease in or elimination of physical violence as a form of discipline;
2. Increased knowledge of child rights; and,
3. Increased knowledge and commitment to ending the restavèk practice and not sending children away.

Thirty-five schools received training and support, and 25 school gardens were planted, leading 49 families to plant home-based vegetable gardens. PAMM (Graduation methodology) is accompanying 80 families on the path out of poverty. More than 200 adults gained literacy skills and planted community gardens.

Ending Violence Against Women and Girls / Rethinking Power Program

BB's Rethinking Power (RP) program engages communities in driving social change process to prevent violence against women and girls (VAWG) and HIV. RP also provides technical support to local organizations to implement community mobilization in their own communities.

RP completed creating and testing Power to Girls, trained and accompanied eleven Haitian organizations, and conducted a final evaluation in five pilot communities. The January 2016 evaluation revealed:

- The number of community members who believe that a married woman has a right to tell others if her husband has beaten her increased by 33%.
- The number of people who recognize that a man imposing control over the family finances is a kind of violence grew by 24%.

- People who believed that it is generally a woman's fault if a man rapes her decreased by 44%.
- Couples in which neither men nor women reported more decision-making power than the other grew by 35%.
